Allow yourself about 1.5 hours for this relaxing stroll through the centre of the city. The route takes you to numerous places of interest, through narrow alleyways and enticing streets, across beautiful squares, past historic buildings and modern architecture.

Guided tours as well as trips by vintage bus or by boat, can be booked at the Touristinfo.

Be quickly informed – wherever you are!

City tours, places of interest, events and much more:
www.braunschweig.de/english

The most beautiful facets of the Lion City in pictures can be found at WWW.BRAUNSCHWEIG.DE/INSTAGRAM as well as via the hashtag #entdeckeBraunschweig
Burgplatz

The Burgplatz (Castle Square) is an ensemble of immense historical and cultural importance. Since the 9th century, the Brunone prince’s residence has been located here. In the 12th century, under Duke Henry the Lion, the Burgplatz became the central point of the Guelph power. It is bordered by the Castle Dankwarderode (museum), the St. Blasi cathedral, the classical Vieweghaus (State Museum) and beautiful timber-framed houses. At the central point of the square stands the statue of the lion. The bronze sculpture from the year 1166, once plated with gold, was erected by Henry the Lion as a symbol of his power and jurisdiction and was the first free-standing statue north of the Alps. The original and a selection of the Guelph treasures can be viewed in the Castle Dankwarderode, once Henry the Lion’s residence. The castle was reconstructed in 1887 in accordance with the original layout from 1175.

St. Blasi Cathedral

Today, the former collegiate church on the south side of the Burgplatz is an evocative Lutheran cathedral. It was erected by Henry the Lion between the years of 1173–1195 as a triple-nave vaulted basilica. The cathedral was designated by Henry the Lion as his burial place, where he was then laid to rest in 1195 next to his wife, Mathilde. The burlar place for Otto IV, German emperor and king, son of Henry the Lion, is also in the cathedral. The most important works of art include the Altar of Our Lady (1188), the seven-armed candelabrum (around 1170/80), the carved wooden crucifix from Master Imervard as well as relics of Otto IV., German emperor and king, son of Henry the Lion. The church is one of the most important examples of Romanesque architecture in Germany.

Rathaus und Platz der Deutschen Einheit

The neo-gothic Rathaus (town hall) was originally erected by the City Building Councillor Ludwig Winter between the years of 1894–1900. The tower of the Rathaus is 61 metres high, has 161 steps and offers a wonderful view across the city rooftops. During the week, the tower can be climbed from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. The entrance to the Rathaus is at Kohlmarkt 9.

Residenzschloss

The Residenzschloss (Ducal Palace) was badly damaged in World War II and was then completely demolished in 1960. The reconstruction of the main façade, including the front palace rooms and integrating more than 600 original parts, was completed in 2007. The Ducal Palace accommodates the city library and archives, the city’s cultural institute and the Palace Museum. As with the historic palace, the portico of the Residenzschloss is crowned with a chariot and horses. It is the largest quadriga in Europe and depicts the goddess of the city, Brunonia, at the reins. The group, cast in silicon bronze, is more than 9m high, 7.5m wide and 9.5m long and weighs 25.8t. The quadriga can be viewed via a visitors’ platform. The entrance to the stairs and lift can be found to the right of the portico. Viewing is possible in summer (Apr. to Sep.) from 10:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. and in winter (Oct. to Mar.) from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The two equestrian statues on the Schlossplatz (Palace Square) depict Duke Carl Wilhelm Ferdinand of Braunschweig (1733–1806) and his son Friedrich Wilhelm (1771–1815).

Magniviertel

The Magniviertel area is among the oldest quarters in the city. With its many timber-framed houses, it exhibits its own rustic charm. In stark contrast to this is the colourful “Happy RIZZI Houses”, on the corner of street Georg-Eckart-Straße, which was designed by the New York artist James Rizzi and is used as an office building. Around the Magni church, which was reconstructed in 1956, are numerous well-maintained houses and charming little streets, such as the Herrenhofstrasse at the Magni (Magni gateway) to the east of St. Magi, all of which add to the delight of a stroll through the historic quarter. The Municipal Museum on Lovernwall invites you to enjoy its comprehensive collection of exhibits from Braunschweig’s artistic and cultural history, as well as temporary exhibitions and events.

Agilenmarkt

In the centre of the Agilen marketplace is the Agilen church. The original Roman Benedictine church from 7115 and the monastery buildings were damaged in the great city fire of 1278 and a new building in Gothic cathedral style was erected. The church is the only example of early Gothic cathedral architecture in Braunschweig. To the north of the church, the Agilen market was established as a marketplace for the mediaeval district of Altwiek. The marketplace is surrounded by a number of interesting, widely differing buildings. To the south of the church, at street Spohrplatz 7, Braunschweig’s oldest remaining timber-framed building can be found. It was built in 1357 and was the birthplace of the composer Louis Spoehr.

Kohlmarkt

The Kohlmarkt (Coal Market) played a key role in Braunschweig’s early days as a junction of major mediaeval trading routes. Today, it is a popular meeting place and location for numerous mediaeval events. Its character is formed by the diversity of architecture and historic facades which document its rich history. Particularly worth seeing are the facades of the buildings “Haus zum goldenen Stern” and “Haus zur Rose” on the corner of street Schulstraße as well as the “Haus zur Sonne” on the opposite side.

Altastradmarkt

This square was built in the 12th century and was the venue for the main and annual markets, for fairs and executions and for mediaeval tournaments, parades and processions. Today, the Martin church (12th–14th centuries), the Gewandhaus (Cloth Hall) and the Alstadtthrasaus (Old Town Hall) still offer a unique backdrop for the traditional weekly market. The Alstadtthrasaus, today a museum, is one of the most beautiful Gothic architectural monuments in the city. The historic trade reference measurement – the “Braunschweiger Elle” – is embedded in the wall of its portico. The Marienbrunnen fountain (1408) and the old Customs’ and Defence House (1643) are also extremely worth seeing. The adjoining Gewandhaus from 1590 served as warehouse and sales platform for the cloth merchants, the most distinguished guild in the old town. The east facade is one of the most significant examples of Renaissance architecture in Braunschweig.

Find out more: www.braunschweig.de/sights